Having Breakfast

He ordered his regular breakfast. Two eggs sunnyside up, hash browns and two strips of bacon. He continued to look at the menu wondering if this would be the day he added something new. This was also part of the routine. A few second of the hesitation to see if something else would be added to the order before demuring and saying that would be all. It was the same exact meal that he had ordered every day for the past two years.

The Guardian view on artificial intelligence's revolution: learning but not as we know it

Editorial

GPT-3, the software behind the world's best non-human writer, is a giant step forward for machines. What about humanity?

OpenAI's new language generator GPT-3 is shockingly good—and completely mindless

The AI is the largest language model ever created and can generate amazing human-like text on demand but won't bring us closer to true intelligence.
